A private letter from James Presser Power, who is a lady in this place, states that he has sold 12 miles and two horses at fair price, but says it is slow.

British, little daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas, of this place, has been quite sick. It was first thought she had the croup, but the fact was developed that she had the whooping-cough. She is better now.

The world-wide reputation of Ayer's Hair-Vine is due to its healthy action on the hair system, through which it restores, gives hair to its original strength and imparts softness and freedom which makes it so much desired by all classes and conditions of people.

S. J. Salyer, a student of Hazel Green Academy, was called to West Liberty Theatre day night last on account of the extreme illness of Mr. W. J. Palmer, of the C. & O. Line. He failed to live two hours after his arrival. In their bereavement and sorrow they will mourn the loss of a man highly esteemed by all.

Henry L. Godfrey, of this place, has been called to the office to act as agent for the W. O. Miss in the district, and to take the office of recording clerk of the House of Representatives, and will leave for that place in a few days. The position pays about $7 per day, and Henry's friends are very glad that he has been so lucky.

Whenever you want to systematically wear black, or any other color, it is almost that same as our theories. See the Firm H&A office and examine "Severey's Ledger." If you use it once you will never consent to be without it thereafter. It is a dandy, and don't you allow your mortal faculties to be come dormant as to the fact.

The late cold spell and snow storm passed over with the usual facilities of the weather. In a severe frost we were all dressed at this office from Friday the 6th of January, until last Thursday night. A private letter from Mr. Sterling informs us that many miles were received there after the 8th inst. until Wednesday the 13th.

The attention of the merchants of Eastern Kentucky is especially directed to the east end of J. F. Rogers' dry goods store at Shipley, Doisy & Co. dry goods mercantile, corner 4th and Elm street, Cincinnati. Mr. Rogers is so well and favorably known to the people of this section that even those who do not care to buy of him, are compelled to say that Shipley, Doisy & Co. have secured in Mr. Rogers one of the most popular men they could have found, and that his connection with their house will greatly increase their sales "in this neck of the woods."

Licking Valley Scourer.—"The Chap Coop, Mr. Henry C. Cox and S. J. Salyer, of this city, are attending the Hazel Green Academy. When will our citizens come to a realization sense of the importance of building up a school of their own, and not depend on the schools of the Hard Green people, and rejoice in the progress they are making on the high-way to prosperity?" Jas. C. Cooper and Henry C. Cox are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. C. Cooper, who are the proprietors of this place. It is possible that Rev. Mr. Cooper does not know his own citizens, especially those "to the manor born?"

Chiles Thompson & Co., of Mt. Sterling, want all the hide, tallow, ginseng, bone, &c., in this country, and propose to pay top prices for everything of the kind. So if you have anything of the sort to sell, pay you to write to Chiles, Thompson & Co. They all know them as well as that it is unnecessary for me to tell them about their merits. One thing is very certain, those who have dealt with them in the past have always given them a high price. We advise our citizens to consider their own advertising in the Herald, which will insure you a prompt reply and their best price.

COCAINE.

High Authority Decrees the New Drug a Powerful Poison.

At a recent meeting of the Medical Society, held in Hamilton Hall, Columbia College, Prof. Doremus, the chairman of the committee, proposed of cocaine as a poison. He read a letter from a young doctor in Kansas, who related that he had been called to attend a boy, whom he found in a critical condition. She was in convulsions, the pupil of her left eye was dilated, her arms were powerless and there was great inflation. Three hours later she died.

The day before she was in her usual health, except that she was suffering from a severe toothache. She applied a four per cent solution of hypodermic cocaine to the sore tooth, the left side of her face, where the decayed teeth were, and a few hours later she was in a state of convulsions. The Kansas doctor sent to Professor Doremus the pain containing what was left of the cocaine, and the Professor had it in the table before him at the meeting.

As soon as the Professor received the drug he set on foot a series of investigations, and the result was that the cocaine was almost entirely true, and the result was that in a large number of instances the symptoms were similar to those developed in the case of the Kansas woman. There were some discrepancies. "But," said the Professor, "there are well differences to be observed in the action of cocaine; in some cases arsenic having produced the usual violent convulsions and vomiting, in another it has even been a narcotic." I am given the conclusion that the Kansas girl died from cocaine poisoning. It is a drug we are all too fond of, and carelessness in its use is exercised in making it. Druggists should be required to label it poison. A friend of mine said: "We have a druggist here who sells poison." People even acquire the taste for it. I expect to him that people also acquired the morphine habit, and the same would hold good that morphine was a poison."

Dr. William F. Holloman, said he had heard that fatal cases of cocaine had occurred in one of the city hospitals. He himself had used it recently without bad effects in removing a cataract. His eyes were so weak to sleep and nothing else could have done during the operation. It was interesting to note the effect of fatal poisoning reported by the Kansas woman. After application, and it would be of value to hear from Dr. Douglas the result of his experiments in applying, nearly every day, for a year, a dose of cocaine to General Grant's throat. A friend of his from Philadelphia told him that in the case of the man who gave up the cocaine habit, and who then kept on it for days without food, drink with stimulants, similar to those described above, he died. Such cases were not uncommon. He was convinced that the drug was one that required great care in handling, and that drugs should be handled with care.

Dr. Boldt related some interesting experiments he had recently made upon dogs. He had a dog named Duke, which vented under heavy doses in a few minutes, and the symptoms were analogous to those observed in the Kansas case. One of the effects was an intense salivation, coupled with fear of water, as in hydrocephalus. Dr. Boldt had had recently a case of cocaine poisoning, and had applied a local application to a human being, which, but for prompt measures, would have resulted unfavorably.—N. Y. star.

INDIAN HUMOR.

A very slender outline of an Aborigine Fairy Story.

Once upon a time there was a dwarf, so very small in size that when he killed a wren all by himself, too—he thought he was a hero. He had a little house built round in the grass as broad as if he had built it with his own hands. He had one-half of the wren—a fair half; none of the irregular fractions—cooked at one time, and when he had eaten it, and told his sister to cure the skin, as he had a mind to make himself a feather coat. And by and by he did another very small wren, and he had another feather coat. But happening to go to sleep one day in the sun-shine the heat made the birds' skins shrivel up so that they became quite dry and brittle. So the poor little dwarf was furious. He vowed he would pay the sun out. So he got his sister to get a sharp needle and a thread and made a slip knot in her garment and turned it down on the other side of the hill, to the top of it, just where he had been sitting when he was accustomed to go to sleep. And, sure enough, when the sun rose next morning, he ran to the right into the alpine, and the caught the sun, and his sister in her garment was so over-exposure in nature was prodigious, under the dormouse, resembling what was in the sun, and he had the sun play through and released the luminary, whenever everything went on just as if nothing had happened. But the dwarf was not satisfied, and he dug a hole. He was not going, he said, to bother himself about suns anymore. It was not his wife he wanted. He was too much of a man to be trifled with, and so he began making preparations for going out on another sun-hunt.

So he went to the sun, and he had a red Indian "fairy story," which seems to me to illustrate fairly well the tone of the humor of those aborigines Americans. The dwarf, you see, had reached the essential point in the follies of a people who consider a fair physique the first qualification of manhood—and in his search for a wren he had got into the mud and subsequent infestation when he is successful in the chase, the leading idea of the red Indian is really befuddled. He succeeds in an impossible exploit, and, in the true spirit of a hero, makes no face about it, but when he gets into trouble, and when he affects to think, well, this suffices as something beneath him, and sets himself to the task of killing another wren. "For the sake of a few cents of like foolishness and a freshness of scene and circumstance, so that it appears to be the sun, the sun is the more attractive."—San Francisco Independent.
